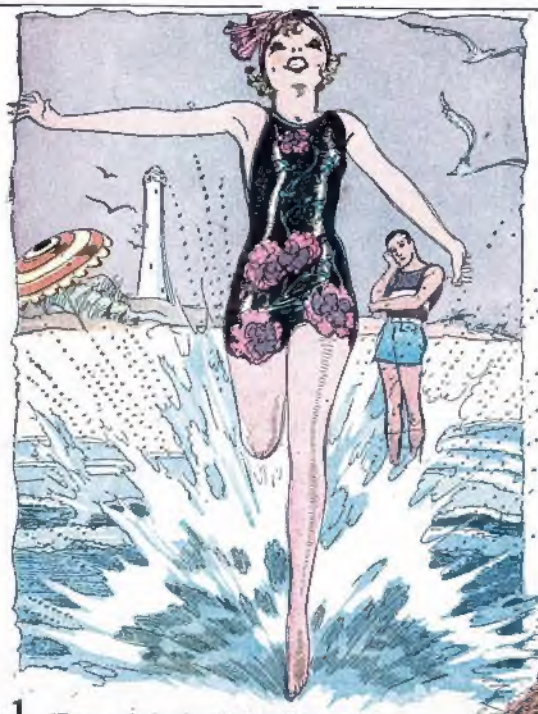
DIMPLES' DAY DREAMS

By NELL BRINKLEY

Another Big Kick From the Footlights

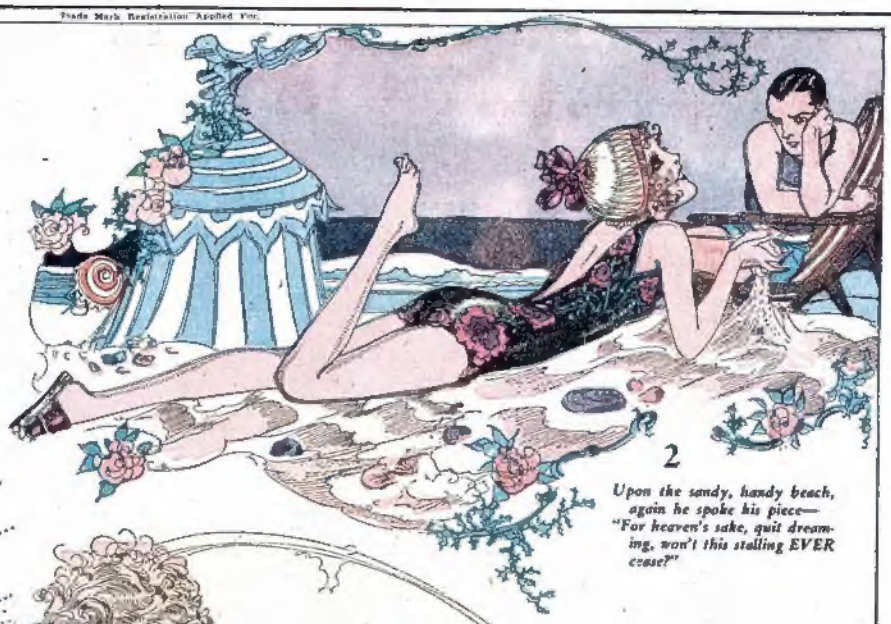
SUNDAY, APRIL 22, 1928

Trade Mark Registration Applied For.



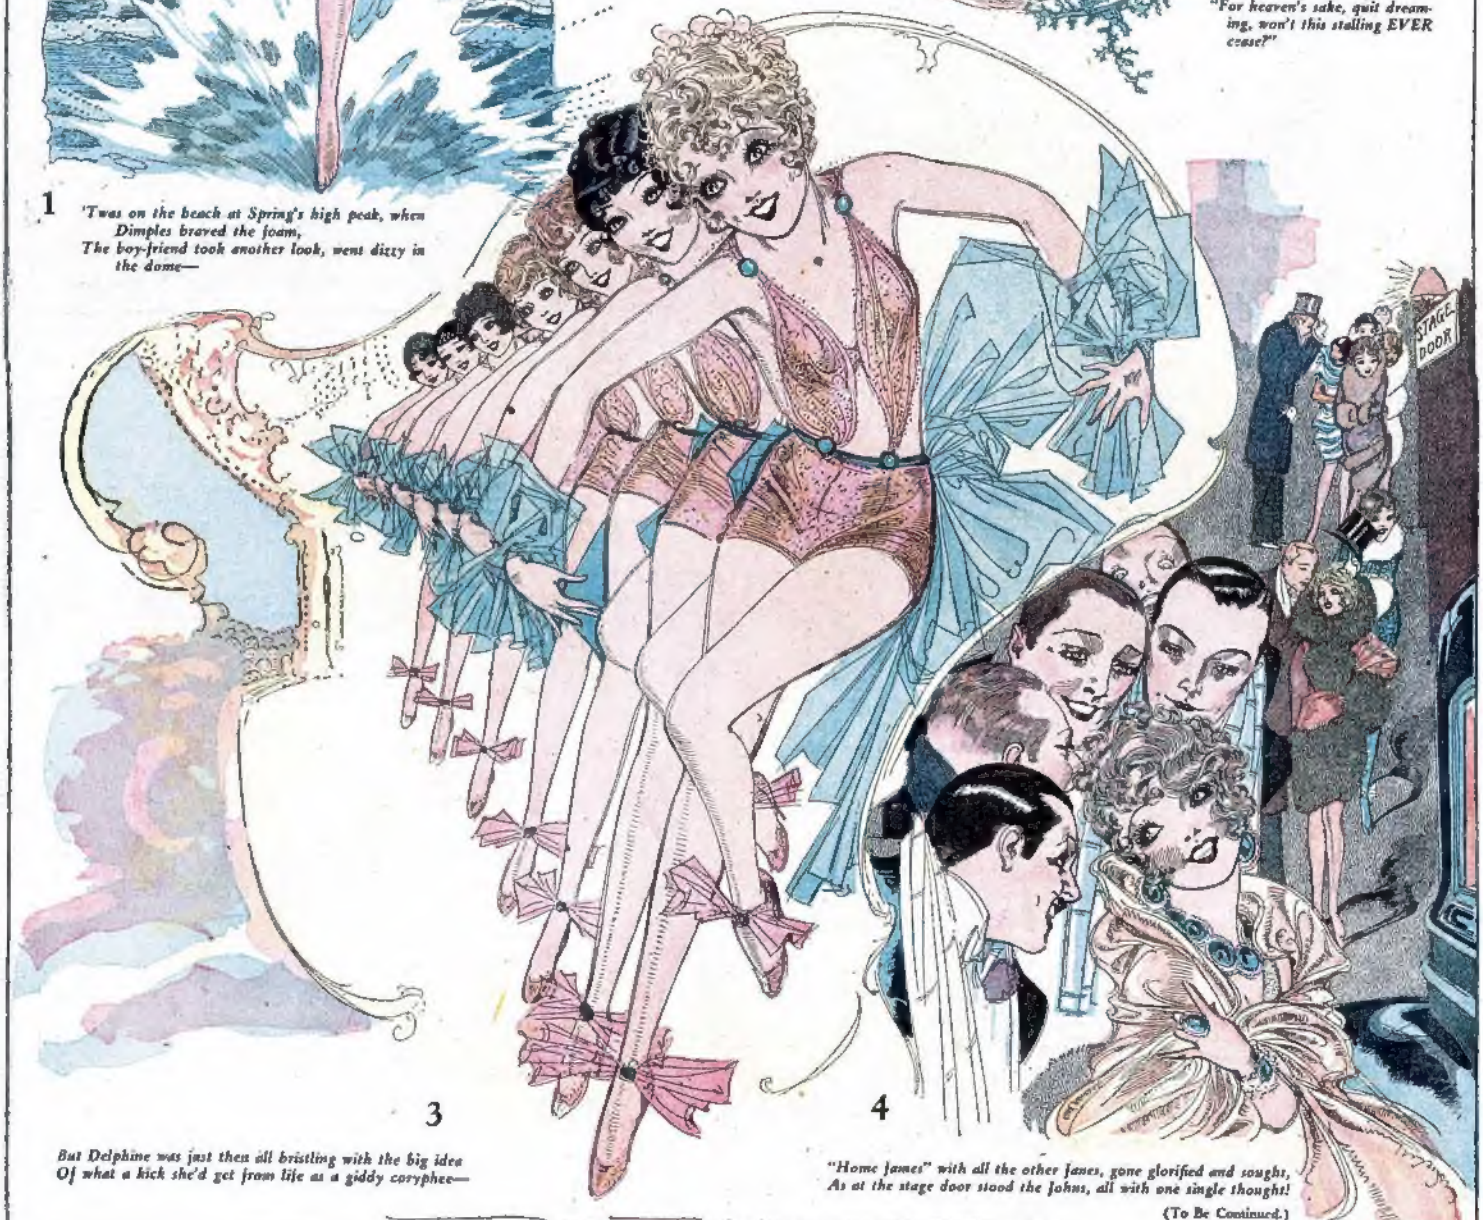
1

'Twas on the beach at Spring's high peak, when
Dimples braved the foam,
The boy-friend took another look, went dizzy in the dome—



2

Upon the sandy, handy beach, again he spoke his piece—
"For heaven's sake, quit dreaming, won't this stalling EVER cease?"



3

But Delphine was just then all bristling with the big idea
Of what a kick she'd get from life as a giddy coryphee—

4

"Home James" with all the other Janes, gone glorified and sought,
As at the stage door stood the Johns, all with one single thought!

(To Be Continued.)

Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.,
Great Britain Rights Reserved.

HOME MAGAZINE

THE SAN FRANCISCO CALL

AN INDEPENDENT AND POST NEWSPAPER

PRICE 5 CENTS

March 31, 1928

Copyright, 1928, New York Evening Journal, Inc.

DIMPLES' DAY DREAMS • By Nell Brinkley

Trade Mark Registration Applied for.

1

Sweet Dimples' thoughts are far away as now the boy friend drones
"Come out of it—and marry me—be pretty Mrs. Jones."

3

Enshrined in fifty million hearts, herself a famous star,
With her imported peke in her imported motor car!

2

But still the "movie bug" persists, for out in Hollywood
Abide the heroes, handsome, idols of all maidenhood.

While "on the set" she acts and acts until she hears a shout—
From the director: "Cut that scene—she'll burn the fuses out!"

4

(To be Continued.)

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)